Many intellectual debts are owed when writing a book like this. First and foremost I would like to acknowledge how much I owe to my former colleagues at the Institute for Fiscal Studies (IFS), and in particular to John Kay who was Director of IFS when I joined the staff in 1985. For an economist interested in policy there can be few more stimulating places to work, where serious thinking about policy is informed by such a wealth of research, data, and evidence.

I have in particular benefited from the Mirrlees Review, a fundamental assessment of the UK tax system initiated by the IFS, which involved many of the world's leading academic researchers and tax policy thinkers. The reports published as a result of this work—the background papers in Dimensions of Tax Design and the final report of the Mirrlees review team Tax by Design, published in 2011—provide a remarkable synthesis of economic theory and evidence, and an authoritative manual for tax policy.

I have written this book during a period of sabbatical leave at Sciences Po in Paris. I am grateful to my own institution, UCL, for supporting this period of leave, and to the Economics Department at Sciences Po for providing me with such a congenial base for research and writing.

Finally, I would like to thank my editors at OUP, Andrea Keegan, Emma Ma, and Jenny Nugee, for their support and advice.
