

The background of the book cover is an abstract composition. The top half is a vibrant purple with visible, swirling brushstrokes. A thick, horizontal band of bright yellow runs across the middle. The bottom half is a dark, charcoal grey, also featuring textured brushwork.

I have been teaching the history of public health to public health students throughout my career at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine and that has helped enormously with this book. The chapters about recent issues have been aided by my observation of the public health scene, from listening to my colleagues' research papers and lectures and from conversations with them. Particular thanks are due to Dr Alan Maryon Davies, Professor David Heymann, and Professor Wayne Hall, who discussed current and future public health issues with me.

Dr Suzanne Taylor helped with checking and with the illustrations, Ingrid James with practical administrative support. My other colleagues at the Centre for History in Public Health have also contributed considerably over time.
