I have researched and written on the topic of thinking and reasoning my entire adult life, since I started my PhD studies in 1969. I had the enormous good fortune to be supervised by Peter Wason, the father of the modern psychology of reasoning. Without Wason's inspiration and mentorship my life would have been very different and this book would never have been written.

My studies of this topic benefitted from collaboration with a number of talented researchers along the way, all of whom helped to shape my thinking about thinking. In particular, I should mention Steve Newstead, Simon Handley, David Over, and Valerie Thompson. I would also like to acknowledge the influence of Phil Johnson-Laird and Keith Stanovich. While I have collaborated formally with each only once, our frequent exchanges of ideas have challenged and inspired me over many years.

Finally, I should acknowledge some direct help with the writing of this book. Linden Ball filled some gaps in my knowledge and both Shira Elqayam and Jane Evans read and criticized the entire draft. I am grateful to them all.
