PREFACE

This concordance to Conrad's The Secret Agent, one of a series of indexes to Conrad's complete works, follows the principles established in A Concordance to Conrad's Lord Jim (1976) and A Concordance to Conrad's Almayer's Folly (1978). The concordance consists of a Verbal Index listing the location of all words used by Conrad, a Word Frequency Table listing number of occurrences for each word in his text, and a Field of Reference in which the user can locate in its context a word cited in the Verbal Index. The field of reference follows the spelling, punctuation, and lineation of the edition of Conrad's The Secret Agent: A Simple Tale published by Methuen and Co., London, 1907. A few minor variations have been introduced in our editing process, however. For example, the Greek letter delta is represented as d, and parentheses appear as slashes. Where there are nonstandard spellings or marks of punctuation, we have followed the 1907 text, even when it seemed in error, provided the error "makes sense" to a native speaker of English. We change in the 1907 text at p. 198 it scharacter to its character, p. 238 Steevie to Stevie, p. 287 find- to finding, p. 425 up-set to upset. We did not change inconsistencies in hyphenation such as bed-clothes / bedclothes, or spellings which are not "correct" but are perhaps "intended," such as exagerated, fradulent, or inspector. Words hyphenated at line end present a difficult problem. Unless the word is hyphenated elsewhere in a line, we assume that the line-end hyphen is merely the printer's convention for the line-end break. Other details of the concordance have already been discussed in the introductory material of the Lord Jim and Almayer's Folly volumes.

We wish to thank the National Endowment for the Humanities whose Research Tools Division supports the University of Wisconsin's Old Spanish Dictionary Project, whose equipment was essential to the development of the Conrad series. Especially we thank Professor John Nitti, Director of the Old Spanish Dictionary Project, and Jean Anderson and Jurgen Patau for their programming work and generous help. We also wish to thank Patricia A. Bender, technical specialist in peripheral equipment, for her assistance in this publication.
