ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

In the Name of Allah,
the All Merciful, the Ever –Merciful

All praise, Gratitude and thanks are to Almighty God. This thesis cannot claim its existence from a single contribution. Therefore, I am much indebted to many people. My profuse thanks goes to my thesis directors Dr. Patrick McCormick and Dr. John Sheveland, without their help, inspiring ideas and deep insight, this thesis would never have been written. It is difficult to mention all those who deserve acknowledgements, but I would like to extend my gratitude to my family for their constant help and unflagging support. My relatives have thrown their support behind me when they realize that I will face an uphill task. I must admit that the topic is rather controversial because of religious, cultural and customs constraints. Although the road was slippery and bumpy, I clung to it, as resolve as ever, to complete my task and achieve my goal. I cannot thank them enough for providing me the psychological boost, which enhanced my confidence. Briefly, constructive remarks, various propositions and useful pieces of advice, from my thesis directors helped me take the bull by the horn and produce this work. Last but not the least, a special thanks to all those authors whose sources have helped shape this work.

I have decided to publish my theses hoping to benefit people understand homosexuality and show the religious teachings on the morality of homosexuality. I also hope to inspire and help scholars, who are doing a research on this topic, with different ideas and sources. May Allah Guide us all to the righteous path.
