

THE LANGUAGE OF EVALUATION

PURDUE UNIVERSITY MONOGRAPHS IN ROMANCE LANGUAGES

William M. Whitby, General Editor
Allan H. Pasco, Editor for French
Enrique Caracciolo-Trejo, Editor for Spanish

Associate Editors

I. French

Max Aprile, Purdue University
Paul Benhamou, Purdue University
Willard Bohn, Illinois State University
Gerard J. Brault, Pennsylvania State University
Germaine Brée, Wake Forest University
Jules Brody, Harvard University
Victor Brombert, Princeton University
Ursula Franklin, Grand Valley State College
Floyd F. Gray, University of Michigan
Gerald Herman, University of California, Davis
Michael Issacharoff, University of Western Ontario
Thomas E. Kelly, Purdue University
Milorad R. Margitić, Wake Forest University
Bruce A. Morrissette, University of Chicago
Roy Jay Nelson, University of Michigan
Glyn P. Norton, Pennsylvania State University
David Lee Rubin, University of Virginia
Murray Sachs, Brandeis University
English Showalter, Rutgers University, Camden
Donald Stone, Jr., Harvard University

II. Spanish

J.B. Avalle-Arce, University of California, Santa Barbara
Rica Brown, M.A., Oxon
Frank P. Casa, University of Michigan
James O. Crosby, Florida International University
Alan D. Deyermund, Westfield College (University of London)
David T. Gies, University of Virginia
Roberto González Echevarría, Yale University
Thomas R. Hart, University of Oregon
David K. Herzberger, University of Connecticut
Djelal Kadir II, Purdue University
John W. Kronik, Cornell University
Floyd F. Merrell, Purdue University
Geoffrey Ribbans, Brown University
Elias L. Rivers, SUNY, Stony Brook
Francisco Ruiz Ramón, University of Chicago
J.M. Sobré, Indiana University
Bruce W. Wardropper, Duke University

Volume 20

Louise Mirrer-Singer

*The Language of Evaluation:
A Sociolinguistic Approach to the Story of
Pedro el Cruel in Ballad and Chronicle*

LOUISE MIRRER-SINGER

THE LANGUAGE OF EVALUATION

A Sociolinguistic Approach to the Story of
Pedro el Cruel in Ballad and Chronicle

JOHN BENJAMINS PUBLISHING COMPANY
Amsterdam/Philadelphia

1986

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data

Mirrér-Singer, Louise

The language of evaluation.

(Purdue University monographs in Romance languages, ISSN 0165-8743; v. 20)

Bibliography: p.

1. Pedro I., King of Castile and Leon, 1334-1369, in fiction, drama, poetry, etc. 2. Spanish literature -- To 1500 -- History and criticism. 3. Romancero del rey don Pedro. 4. López de Ayala, Pedro, 1332-1407. Coronica del rey don Pedro. I. Title. II. Series.

PQ6049.P33M57 1986 860'.9'351 86-9620

ISBN 90 272 1730 0 (European) / ISBN 0-915027-69-0 (US) (alk. paper)

© Copyright 1986 - John Benjamins B.V.

No part of this book may be reproduced in any form, by print, photoprint, microfilm, or any other means, without written permission from the publisher.

To Philip

Contents

List of Tables . . . . .	ix
Acknowledgments . . . . .	xi
Abbreviations . . . . .	xii
1. Introduction. . . . .	1
2. The Language of the Romancero
A. Romancero Grammar . . . . .	7
B. Une beauté grammaticale : The Stylistic Approach to Language in the Romancero . . . . .	10
C. “Altos son y relucían” . . . . .	12
D. The Assonance Argument . . . . .	14
E. Architecture temporelle . . . . .	15
F. “Romancero” . . . . .	16
G. The Performance Factor . . . . .	20
3. A Sociolinguistic Approach to Narrative Structure in the Romancero
A. Introduction. . . . .	25
B. Narrative Structure . . . . .	26
C. Evaluation . . . . .	29
D. Limitations of Labovian Analysis with Respect to the Romancero	32
4. A Sociolinguistic Approach to the Romancero del rey don Pedro
A. Introduction. . . . .	37
B. Historical Background . . . . .	39
C. Legitimizing Trastámaran Rule. . . . .	40
D. A Sociolinguistic Approach to the Romancero del rey don Pedro .	42
1. The Romance de doña Blanca . . . . .	43
2. The Romance de doña Blanca (Text 67) . . . . .	53
3. The Romance del rey don Pedro . . . . .	62
4. The Romance de la muerte de la reina Blanca . . . . .	72

5. A Sociolinguistic Approach to the Crónica del rey don Pedro
A. Introduction. . . . .	83
B. The Crónica and Its Author. . . . .	84
C. Narrative Structure in the Crónica . . . . .	85
D. The Romancero in the Crónica del rey don Pedro . . . . .	87
E. Evaluation in the Crónica . . . . .	90
F. Historical and Traditional Discourse in the Crónica . . . . .	95
6. Conclusion. . . . .	99
Notes . . . . .	103
Works Consulted . . . . .	119

List of Tables

1. Basic Narrative Syntax in an Unevaluated Narrative . . . . .	27
2. Evaluative Clauses in the Romance de la reina doña Blanca (Text 67a) . . . . .	44
3. Evaluative Clauses in the Romance que dice: "Entre la gente se dice" (Text 67) . . . . .	55
4. Evaluative Clauses in the Romance del rey don Pedro el Cruel (Text 66a) . . . . .	64
5. Evaluative Clauses in the Romance del rey don Pedro (Text 66) . . . . .	70
6. Evaluative Clauses in the Romance de doña Blanca de Borbón (Text 68) . . . . .	74
7. Evaluative Clauses in the Romance de la muerte de la reina Blanca (Text 68a) . . . . .	76

Acknowledgments

I should like to thank the following teachers and friends who gave me invaluable criticism and encouragement during the various stages of this study: Rina Benmayor, to whom I owe a particular debt of gratitude; Jean Franco, David Halle, Helen Nader, Kathleen Newman, and Mary Pratt; and Louis Singer, who read the manuscript in its earliest period of development and offered many thoughtful comments. I should also like to thank Samuel G. Armistead, who, from the time I was an undergraduate student of his at the University of Pennsylvania to the present, has served as a mentor and an inspiration in the field of medieval Spanish literature. Stanford University and the Whiting Foundation afforded me generous grants which gave me the opportunity to explore the various issues touched on in this work.

Abbreviations

AEM	Anuario de Estudios Medievales
BAE	Biblioteca de Autores Españoles
BH	Bulletin Hispanique
BHS	Bulletin of Hispanic Studies
ExTL	Explicación de Textos Literarios
HR	Hispanic Review
JAF	Journal of American Folklore
JMRS	Journal of Medieval and Renaissance Studies
MLN	Modern Language Notes
MLR	Modern Language Review
NBAE	Nueva Biblioteca de Autores Españoles
NLH	New Literary History
NRF	Nouvelle Revue Française
NRFH	Nueva Revista de Filología Hispánica
RCEH	Revista Canadiense de Estudios Hispánicos
RFE	Revista de Filología Española
RN	Romance Notes
RPh	Romance Philology
RH: Historia	El romancero hoy: Historia, comparatismo, bibliografía crítica. Ed. Samuel G. Armistead et al. Madrid: C.S.M.P., 1979.
RH: Poética	El romancero hoy: Poética. Ed. Diego Catalán et al. Madrid: C.S.M.P., 1979.
SP	Studies in Philology
WF	Western Folklore

Introduction

¿Qué pide María de Padilla,      qué pide por aguinaldo?
La cabeza del Maestro,      del rey don Pedro su hermano.<sup>1</sup>

These verses, sung today as part of a canto aguinaldero in the Spanish provinces of Segovia and Zamora, belong to an oral tradition that dates back to the Middle Ages. The lines refer to the years of political turmoil and bloodshed that marked the reign of Pedro I, King of Castile. The question and answer they present recollect the bitter hatred between the Castilian monarch and his illegitimate half brothers, the Trastámaras. Invoking the name of the King's mistress, María de Padilla, they also recall the strained relations between Pedro and his wife, doña Blanca de Borbón.

Clearly, the context within which the present-day canto aguinaldero is sung differs radically from that of the fourteenth-century romance it brings to mind.<sup>2</sup> Yet the fact that the verses continue to detail the mistress's savage demand for the head of the King's half brother indicates that the Spanish Romancero is a vital tradition capable of at once supporting the poetic and ideological legacy of the Middle Ages and the preoccupations of contemporary life.<sup>3</sup>

The Spanish Romancero is described by Diego Catalán as poesía oral de creación colectiva, capaz de retener, durante siglos y siglos, memoria fiel de toda una serie de pormenores tocantes a un suceso pretérito, real o imaginario, pero, a la vez, abierta a continua renovación, a continua re-creación.<sup>4</sup>

It has at its base an oral literary form which is maximally accessible to a general public. The Romancero language is virtually free of the figurative speech common to lyric poetry. Its preponderance of verbs and nouns lends it "a certain forthrightness,"<sup>5</sup> and its direct manner, seen in the extensive use of the vocative,<sup>6</sup> affords a wide appeal. But the properties of the Romancero that have allowed infinite recasting of the romances go beyond this formal base. On the one hand, it is the tradition of anonymity in the collective re-creation of the texts which invests the Romancero with its distinctive apertura.<sup>7</sup> On the other, it is the stories contained in the romances and the way in which they are narrated that have advanced the Romancero as an open-ended genre.

The story content of a particular romance is often a key element in its longevity, for the open-ended nature of narrative is its capacity to be reinterpreted so that one story spawns another. Some stories, which feature historical or political situations, seem to have a natural capability for inspiring public interest beyond the actual events they relate. These stories convert specific historical events into philosophical abstractions which are of general "human interest" and, therefore, are forever relevant.

The timeless qualities of these types of stories have not gone unnoticed in Romancero studies. Menéndez Pidal, for example, addresses this topic in his examination of the romances noticieros, concluding that many of these "news-bearing" ballads have perished because "los romances noticieros sólo perduran cuando les sostiene su propio valor intrínseco o el interés general de una época memorable."<sup>8</sup>

The verses cited at the beginning of this chapter exemplify the life-prolonging traits Menéndez Pidal points to. They undoubtedly were prompted by the noticiero Romance de don Fadrique, yet because they conserve nothing of the historical context within which they originated, their survival must be attributed to more than lasting historical interest alone. Figuring significantly in the timelessness of these lines is the quality of tellability, or reportability. The shocking demand for a human head made through the two verses of the canto aguinaldero would occupy under any circumstances a high place on the "unspoken permanent agenda" of reportable matters.<sup>9</sup> The story of Marfa de Padilla's bloodthirstiness concerns a flagrant violation of customary rules of behavior, worthy of introduction into any number of narrative or dramatic situations.<sup>10</sup> The same is true of many other long-enduring romances and romance fragments, including additional, related romances noticieros from the Romancero del rey don Pedro that have found themselves incorporated into dissociated plays and histories.<sup>11</sup> An additional reason for survival has to do with the form in which the content is cast. The canto aguinaldero, for example, is a traditional Christmas song which is performed each winter as part of the season's festivities.

There is, however, another important factor in the tellability of even the most extraordinary stories. It is possible to tell the same story in different ways, making different points, or sometimes, no point at all. Because a pointless story obscures the reportability of the events it describes, a skilled narrator makes use of grammatical devices to aid in directing audience attention to the story's raison d'être. For example, the two verses from the canto aguinaldero cited above use a question-and-answer format rather than an "objective" third person narration to present María de Padilla's Christmas wish. The consequence of this syntactic maneuver is to foreground María's outrageous