From Jerri: To Beckie, who believes in me enough to take the first step herself, and for Connie, who never stopped cheering . . . ever. I love you both!

From Mary: To Jim Roberts of Carnegie Mellon University, who taught me to teach. To Lorrie Kim, who said, "This is too good to keep to yourself." To Jerri Ledford, my co-author and mentor, who said, "You can do this." Again. And again. And again. And for Mom, because there aren't enough words.

About the Authors

Mary E. Tyler is a professional technology journalist and a former software and web developer. She specializes in Open Source, enterprise software, intellectual property, motorcycles, and anything Macintosh. Tyler has three daughters, four cats, one small, fluffy lapdog, and a spouse in the career military.

Jerri Ledford has been a freelance business-technology writer for more than 10 years, with more than 700 articles, profiles, news stories, and reports online and in print. Her publishing credits include: Intelligent Enterprise, Network World, Information Security Magazine, DCM Magazine, CRM Magazine, and IT Manager's Journal. She has also written a number of books. When not writing, she divides her time between Mississippi and Tennessee, hiking, gardening, playing with electronic gadgets, and spending time with friends and family, who refer to her fondly as "tech support."

Acknowledgments

From Mary: First, thanks to my stellar agent, Laura Lewin, and the staff at Studio B. They're good folks. Thanks to Bill Bridges, our developmental editor; Todd Meister, tech editor; Katie Mohr, who acquired this book for the publisher, and everyone else at Wiley who made it printable. Thanks, also, to the engineers at Google who answered our questions and to the cool staff of Browsercam.

Endless gratitude to my fellow writers online, who gave me community, advice, and various kicks in the pants as needed. There are too many to name, but they all hang out at The Writing Mother and Jay's Writers' World. For first books, there are simply too many people to thank. Apologies to anyone I forgot.

From Jerri: Mary, I really appreciate your bringing me in on this project. It's been a wild ride, girl! You're a phenomenal writer, and I've learned much along the way.

We couldn't have created the book without the help of some very dedicated "Googlites." To David Salinas, Brett Crosby, Christina Powell, Michael Mayzel, and Brandon McCormick, thanks for all your help and for pointing us in the right direction. And thanks to my very own "Google Guy," Alex Ortiz. Your passion for and belief in Google Analytics comes through, my friend. I am more appreciative than you'll ever know for your answers and your efforts in ensuring that there aregreat screenshots for our readers to see.

There's also an entire team of people at Wiley who helped make the book possible. Mary has mentioned several, and I'll add my thanks to Katie Mohr and Mary Beth Wakefield (wonderful, helpful people) and Bill Bridges, the funniest, easiest-to-work-with development editor I've encountered. And Todd Meister, who gets huge thanks for ensuring the technical accuracy of the book. His suggestions guaranteed that you, the reader, would understand exactly what we meant.
